

Emancipation Procellation : A name is just two words

Part 1 – Introduction

In order to understand introspection as a tool for understanding underlying issues within the psyche, the main point of introspection being an analysis of the inner workings (internal) of the mind, one must first travel to a point in both time and in space with which to transport one's self. Remain calm and focused, remain in the moment and direct the first point and order in motion.

Here is 1 reason why I struggle with the thought of changing my name.

- I was born with this name, it is my fathers name and he isn't here any more, plus it is my mothers married name so when she isn't here with us (god willing that isn't too soon) I will remember her every time someone says my name. i.e. taking my mothers maiden name as opposed to getting married is one way of realising a long lost dream of meeting a family I never had.

Every thought you transmit in the form of alpha, beta and delta through to theta brainwaves are electromagnetic. As a result they can potentially have receptor cells in the brain with which to transmit and receive messages like a microphone and amp. But imagine that these brain waves were non-linear.

Here are 20 reasons why changing my name for marriage was important to me once.

1. Enamoured with the thought of marriage, I once thought that having someone else's name would make me happy. But if I am not happy a name won't matter.
2. Love is free.
3. According to Shakespeare, changing a rose's name won't matter to it's appearance, smell or even how it tastes. The difference between a rose by another name and a person changing their name is a rose cannot choose it's English or Latin name, a person can.

4. It doesn't matter whether you take a person's name or they take yours, what matters is how they feel towards (about) you and what they show or express in reality.
5. It is easier to fight intolerance and racial abuse when you have someone to back you up, whether that is in name alone or otherwise.
6. It means a different signature (of which the first one took nearly 12 years to create).
7. It means a new bank account and (or) card.
8. It means convincing someone that I am serious and that they should be too.
9. It means I have to remember who I am everywhere I go (i.e. someone else's name as my own is something that plays on my mind every now and again like a flight of fancy).
10. It means I have to remember who I was once (i.e. someone else's name is meant to complete the fantasy and make life as a couple a permanent thing. I don't believe in divorce but it is a real issue for modern society. If people realised that marriage is meant to be for life, maybe they would learn to listen to one another and protect the sacred institution of simply being in love, for a long time – or for life).
11. It means I have to remember the ball and chain (i.e. having your partner's name for the rest of your life is a tall order. Women have been forced to become someone they were not prior to marriage, why is it that men can't simply do the same?).
12. It symbolises a commitment to equality (especially if you have a double barrelled name),
13. You become feminism personified as a man taking on your female partner's name. But what if you are a homosexual or lesbian couple (who's name is the more dominant?).
14. It is more than simply a commitment to your partner for life, it is a commitment to their children (but what of your own where you have children?).

15. It is a huge question of acceptance. You take on board all their issues, problems and miseries as well as joys and elations. It isn't just a name, it becomes your life.
16. It isn't easy to imagine being the husband (or) wife of someone else, but it is meant to be a happy, life changing situation. A well-spring of happiness in which every day is different or the same depending on who you are with and how you both enjoy each other's company.
17. You move from being simply one person to being a symbol of the trust and faith placed in you, not just by them but their family as well.
18. It highlights something of a divergence between traditional sentimentality with regards to marriage and the new age.
19. It's about both of you, but if you haven't ever discussed it, then it's not really real.
20. Saving a relationship is a constant reminder within a name.

All systems require a level of entropy with a view to creating an equilibrium; a synthesis of quantum temporal-dynamic theorem, management and economics. For example, the idea that it would be possible to travel faster than or close to the speed of light by accelerating a particle at speed into space wrapped in layer upon layer of metal spheres. Each sphere would consist of a relatively dense metal such as iron. The spheres would be made up of strips of circular hollow wheel-like objects.

Here are 20 less sentimental reasons why marriage is unimportant

1. I'm a bachelor.
2. I'm free.
3. I can leave as and when it feels comfortable for me to do so.
4. I don't have to be told what to do by anyone.
5. I don't have to listen to anyone.
6. I can grow comfortable in my loneliness.
7. I don't have to assess my manliness or potential lack of masculinity.

8. I can be a pig in my own sty and nobody will tell me to tidy up or look after myself (this is a choice).
9. I can date, if someone is willing to. Where they are not, I can grow comfortable in my solitude.
10. If I have an argument with someone, I don't have to stay in their company for the sake of a name.
11. I don't have to respect anyone else's feelings or wishes.
12. I don't have to argue for a remote control.
13. I don't have to worry about dinner (or someone else paying for dinner if I am short).
14. I can sort out my mental health in my own time without being pushed.
15. I have a family already who support me if I need it.
16. In the modern world they always end in divorce.
17. I don't know how to be a husband let alone how to love myself.
18. I don't have enough love for someone else.
19. I am selfish.
20. My arrogant ego doesn't allow any thoughts of someone else's life. Therefore I won't hurt anyone and won't get hurt myself.

The objective being to jettison layer upon layer using a pressurised spring and gas to accelerate incrementally. The object would be colossal and assembled in space, with each layer holding a camera, infra red detector, radio frequency scanner, laser guidance technology and speakers along with a standard message; just in case. If 360 or more of these large balls of communications technology were assembled and sent out into space like satellites, they could have a central core unit that would act as a relay station, boosting and powering signals back to listening outposts dotted throughout space. The question is, is the world ready to undertake something as audacious as this, considering the closest any government has come to founding a structure in space is the International Space Station.

20 reasons why rehabilitation is rubbish collection

1. Rather than community service, how about rubbish collection in Africa.

2. Rather than community service anywhere, how about rubbish collection in Africa.
3. Rather than a jail sentence, how about rubbish collection in Africa.
4. Public funds nothing, how about rubbish collection in Africa.
5. New services and democracy? Rubbish, pick up, Africa.
6. So you murdered, raped and killed? Rubbish must be collected from sun up to sun down.
7. You don't like the smell? How about recycling in Africa after the collection of Rubbish?
8. But you've never worked. Cool how about working on picking up rubbish in Africa.
9. Global civil society? Collect the rubbish, in Africa.
10. Gap year? Pick up the rubbish please, in Africa.
11. Reparations is the ability not to pay someone but to show someone they have nothing to fear. So, how about picking up rubbish, in Africa.
12. Fear of a black planet was an album. So, refuse collection times in Africa?
13. Clean streets? How about Africa and time?
14. So lengthy prison sentence. How many people work in jail? Free ticket to Africa?
15. Anti-racist thought and attitude is equal to respect which is earned. You may not need my respect or my kids or their kids, but how about saving £600 per person, per week for prison cells in Britain (approximate figure from years ago – I am not the minister of Justice). So, why is poverty historic? Because you show us how valuable your time is by picking up rubbish!
16. Because the U.N in Africa have done a great job since 1945. So how about that rubbish huh? In Africa.
17. Hugs for hoodies? Lets get the job done so kids don't have to play in rubbish heaps in Africa.
18. Because whilst civil society is snobbery, and religion is snubbery, Africa still has a lot of hope that someone will pick up the rubbish.
19. Remember Global Disarmament? Cool, if you all en masse make an exodus to Africa to pick up rubbish, I'll be there with you in spirit (largely because, unless you physically send me the fares to pick up the rubbish, I have to save up every penny to do just that, only for someone to choose to chuck rubbish out of a window, because the government won't plant bins and refuse collectors for all the great ideas).
20. So, you don't want to do it? What is a good deed and why would your faith dictate that good deeds are moral? Who is your neighbour and why do you want to treat them as yourself? What does faith or belief mean? Why fear the lord when I have the mind of someone else's ignorance and stereotypical bias to fear?

Now, in the age of the International Space Station, the African Union are preparing to go into space nearly 100 years after the moon landings. What kind of world will we live in then? The first colony on Mars? The first B.M.E (Black Minority Ethnic) female Prime Minister in the United Kingdom to advocate peace and Global Disarmament?

20 reasons why rehabilitation works only for the scared (remember you have morals etc.)

1. A man murders out of fear or self protection (as opposed to preservation, that's what shops were created for. The preservation of preservatives).
2. Jails are artificially constructed idea's that Jeremy Bentham would agree is costly and largely fail to create social order or change.
3. Jesus set prisoners free.
4. Chain gangs and slavery are not British morals or ideals, but neither is robbing a supermarket with a gun.
5. Knife Crime is on the rise, because people don't have anything to do.
6. Riots are on the rise, because people don't know what else to do.
7. Wars are on the rise because people have not been shown anything different.
8. Jails for serious offenders such as maximum security prisons should simply stop receiving food. No more hunger strike(s), give the food to the homeless. (why is this wrong)
9. Save money and tax etc. by simply not opening a jail for business after a few weeks. (why is this wrong)
10. Forget the states duty of care to individuals. Gas them all (prisoners of the state at her majesties leisure and then you have something to pray for) – is this morally cool?
11. Rehabilitation involves learning, growing and spending money on policies that affect a person's life with full impact, so, why not teach someone in jail to read the law?
12. Rehabilitation involves learning, growing and spending money on policies that affect a person's life so, why not teach someone in jail how to get a degree in community development?
13. Rehabilitation involves learning, growing and spending money on policies that affect a person, why not teach them how not to be violent through psychological appraisal and rehabilitate the mind as well as the body?
14. Rehabilitation involves learning, growing and spending money on good thoughts, why not send every prisoner a letter of peaceful protest and request they teach you how to be a better person through their words thought's and actions.
15. Video conferencing with the U.N, A.U and E.U with a view to altering the nature not of politics but the nature of a persons life.
16. Only ever show people in prison the politics channel so they understand what politics is and why they are barred.
17. Give them food and prepare them for litter collection in Africa.

18. Give them peace and prepare them for litter collection in Africa.

19. Give them an idea of what a snake bite in the middle of the night or the sound of a hyena or lion in the middle of the night might sound like. Litter collection in Africa is rehabilitation of a continent.

20. Now apply all of these to a civil populous in Africa because until the litter is picked up by politicians and students alike, there really is no hope for a world that only wants a history book with the next name in how to fight a war internationally. If your blood hungry, have my blood. If your flesh hungry, have my flesh. If your not a cannibal (like me, as I eat basically rice every day or pasta, every day) try eating a dog that you purchased in an African supermarket or a Chinese supermarket and then ask me why I believe in Global Disarmament over eating you or your pet Shih Tzu or horse etc.

Part 2

The last of the bee's to pollinate a plant within this atmosphere will be the end of our environment and ecosystem. From that point onwards, the world will become a more than hostile place, an environment of which greenhouse gases will cease to be an issue and food shortages will become the order of the day globally. Radio-nuclear exercises with live ammunition will equally cease to be an issue as the food shortages become an issue. Riots in the streets with chants such as "London has fallen, long live London!".

20 reasons for Global Disarmament.

1. Because the story of Global Disarmament is about learning how to be human, not how to be a hate figure for all of humanity.
2. Because having the choice as to whether you walk down empty streets alone and still feel safe is important.
3. Because predators must learn that simply assuming a woman's safety is paramount is one thing, but making an entire Global Populous the same as one nation means the war for the end of life is already under way (i.e. imagine a world where everyone respected everyone else not for race, class or creed or even fear of a gun, but because equality is everywhere and not just in one nation).

4. Imagine the person who takes drug(s) or drinks. Now imagine they are in charge of a key. That key controls a nuclear bomb trigger. Prove that they can always remember not to fire at any nation.

5. Human error and mistakes happen regularly.

6. Because a computer that controls who lives and dies (or a person) is not fulfilling the promises of the riches of heaven, but rather doing the absolute opposite of saving the world as with an immortal leader who is, as with us all, very much just a person.

7. Because there are more things to talk about than simply murder and death.

8. Because I have spent the last 12 years fighting (in my own way) for the very same thing to the detriment of my family life and every friendship or relationship I have ever known. Fighting for people I don't know and an equality I now will never know.

9. Because anything short falls short of the glory of a heaven that will never exist.

10. Because it would be nice to see church again. Or even have a choice to worship in a synagogue or a mosque or have intellectual conversations about faith without a fear of racialised murder based around the ad nauseam stereotype.

11. Because stereotypes are not the rule, but rather a singular rule.

12. Because Hitler wins if we all carry guns.

13. Because educating the person who calls themselves a Neo-Nazi as to the policy of human extermination as opposed to finding love and happiness is all there is.

14. Because extremist views are everyone's problem.

15. Because if people fear gun but not Chernobyl, what happens if a nuclear bomb misfires in Korea? What happens if the thermodynamic radiation is carried in the water and affects the human genome of an entire global populous? Does radiation dissipate in water or float on the surface?

16. Because I didn't ask for Trident, it is just there, being renewed in Scotland so that when Hitler does rise again, we can bomb him?

17. Because I was raised with manners enough to keep asking for something that no one man, woman or child has the right to believe of their own volition. Indoctrination with a value that is Anti-American (in Britain, or Africa or Singapore or anywhere where they fear American Imperialism and the wars of angry men, or women is the very reason why Korea disarmed and then recommenced testing of nuclear weapons as with Iraq, Iran and many other nations.

18. Because there are homeless children who sleep in darkness (due to lack of lamp posts), who are raped in darkness (because of ignorance), who are killed in darkness (because of stupidity), who are raised to value guns (because you are an adult), who starve in darkness (because you have money and food), who judge you in darkness (because they could be Jesus Christ reborn), and who don't even know that World War II is over, or what a war is and why we commemorate the end of a war.

19. Because people died in vain so that you, as a nation or you as an individual could travel somewhere, make a film about peace and then go back to where the guns are cheap or free.

20. Because how else can you create peace in any state be it Pakistan or India, Zimbabwe or South Africa when you can only lead by the example set by someone 400 years ago when the modern world as it is in its current form was filled with highwaymen, day light robbery and slavery as well as irreligious thoughts and deeds, no police, no helicopters, no fridges, no television, nothing sacred apart from the God who is to this day thought to be a Capitalist (because enrichment of a spirit means something in church but in real life enrichment is nothing more than the regurgitation of someone else's assumption. Get rid of money, make history, get rid of guns, then you can address the issues that any nation faces world-wide as opposed to being a bully who fires at kids with guns or allows kids to fire at kids, with guns).

Emancipation Procellation is the ability to see a person as just that. A person is a person regardless of where they were born on the planet. They could belong to a large, extended family or a tribe, a community of communities all singing together from the same sheet. If you are a human being, which I am, you should be able to see the value in a person, even where they cannot.

20 reasons against Global Disarmament.

1. Hating people I don't know for no reason other than history (the actions of parents, grandparents and further back in time) is what every society does.
2. Everyone loves fighting.
3. The human race is bellicose.
4. The idea of peace is too reminiscent of the 'summer of love' (1960's hippy chat).
5. The thought of causing harm to other people is how I get down.
6. Militia's everywhere in every street, city and country.
7. I enjoy the thought of buying fizzy juice and guns.

8. My kids can appreciate a semi-automatic rifle.
9. For anyone who has never seen an elephant gun, they are the dream.
10. Happiness resides in an ordered society. Order comes from the fear of one another (or the police).
11. Love of the country and it's constitution means the whole world must love one nation alone.
12. Hiroshima and Nagasaki / Pearl Harbour.
13. Nobody lobbying the governmental need for more bullets or body armour (for children in schools).
14. Shootings outside of places of employment.
15. There aren't any disarmed civilian populations.
16. Foreigners and immigration.
17. The death penalty.
18. Because if God is real, he would want a world where people died fighting each other and even their own family.
19. Because nothing in life is free apart from the agony of losing your life to a bullet wound.
20. Because we all love being Nazi (even though, when Germany lost the war and the Nazi party, a political movement in Germany was disbanded, the supporters of a former German Chancellor who dishonourably shot his own face instead of being tried in the International Criminal Court decided that he must have been Jesus because he was able to lie to the public and lead them to become a reflection of who they once were).

Emancipation Procellation is a route to defining your own identity from adolescence to adulthood in a uniform direction. It involves countless introspective theorem coupled with the idea that Physics as a route to defining the ultimate question, what is the fastest an object can go in the universe. Simple(ish), the speed of the accelerated force of gravitation within a 'black body object' or black hole. Entropy and the idea in science of low entropy, that is, a relative level of orchestrated order within a given system. Emancipation Procellation means, the world doesn't have to be limited by the possible, but rather unleashed by the impossible. The dream of Global Disarmament alive in the thoughts of every man, woman and child is a dream that I hope to see one day. People call it crazy, but I would love to see the same community of welcoming and kindly people as the people of Scotland in a tolerant and gun free, crime free environment. Though to some this might seem deluded, it is the difference between living in relative comfort and peace and living with social exclusion, bias and intolerance, or negativity and the negative emotions that hate brings.

20 questions

1. What is a human right?
2. Who made human rights?
3. Why should I value human rights?
4. Where can I buy a human right?
5. Is it human to kill or a right to kill?
6. Because it is your right to kill, should I just go on a rampage killing men, women and children to be equal to you? - irony but as we are not equals.
7. When I am equal and all things, people and life are dead, should I live by myself in the woods or kill myself to then find peace? - irony is this a moral thought?
8. When you drop one bomb on one country (radio nuclear or not) how long does the Chernobyl effect take to wear off in the minds of the survivors?
10. When you choose to think like a mature adult, how long will it take to make a human right?
11. Just because you are able to breathe, see and feel, how old are you when your human right ceases to have value in the modern world?
12. If I reject all civilisation and life on earth to live as a recluse fighting for my own honour will I have earned a human right like a badge of honour?
13. Are human rights made of gold or spiritual fluid?
14. How many human rights are living breathing instruments?
15. Why are some human rights more equal than others?
16. How do you manage and control a human right?
17. Can you get some staff to look after my human rights?
18. Can I get some staff to look after my human rights?
19. If I choose to reject money, is it my human right to live in poverty or your choice?
20. Do people choose to live in poverty or is it circumstantial (a mixture of choices, inability to change and more importantly why not kill all the homeless, kill all the sick and infirm, kill all the prisoners, kill everyone who is different and kill anyone who doesn't have the same shoe size and jeans as you?) - sarcasm with a view to pointing out that extremist viewpoints would leave the Earths population falling short of your quota for the future.

Part 3 – a short story

As Hugh Lord walked carefully amongst them, the remains of civilisation, he shuddered at a thought of any one of their locked jaws, eyes focused on his own. Philosophise sat desperately sinking into the chair as helplessly as a sabre tooth to sinking sands. It was in this moment that Hugh began to record another Flashpoint, this would be the thirty first sighting this week. Hugh continued past the chair with it's back to the living room door, facing the window. He couldn't see Philosophise in the chair. He shifted, struggling a little at first; as he rose steadily from his seated position Philosophise knew it was seven o'clock. There were a number of images that were blurring into one relative stream of colour and sound. They were the Flood. Philosophise was in a quantum state; frozen in this dimension and completely conscious in the next, within the multiverse.

Part 4 – 10 pages of notes for people who don't necessarily have money for paper

1. Homeless people are not always homeless, though they beg for the same reasons.

Desperation, poverty, substance misuse, abusive partners and lack of a supportive, caring infrastructure.

2. Homeless people who are legitimately poverty stricken may not necessarily have sanitary towels, toilet roll or food. I'd prefer goods I didn't even know I needed rather than money I can't spend anywhere.

3. How many cafe's, bars or restaurants have you been to with a homeless person? They are not always crazy and not always struggling with issues such as the insatiable hunger for (chicken noodle soup).

4. What do people do on Christmas day for the homeless?

5. What do the homeless do for you on Christmas day (they allow you to show compassion and salvation for a life that neither of you deserve).

6. What do I do for the homeless?

7. How often does a society change it's law(s)?

8. Why not a constitution?

Notes – reasons why the efforts of a dictator / tyrant left a man hung on Christmas day (religious sentiment or simply rules of the really kind rule makers who of course were all Christian(s) I would assume)

Notes – reasons why bombs always fly eastward from Canada and the America(s)

Notes – reasons why no page numbers and no table of contents are counter convention

Notes – reasons why a narrative which isn't clearly spelled out is difficult to follow / find

Notes – reasons why writing a book in pretty much one take is difficult

Notes – reasons why research versus using learned knowledge are a challenge

Notes – Jazz, blues and swing

Notes – Marco Polo

Notes – Christopher Columbas

Notes (please note, sorry if any of this book is offensive).

I usually write for children to give them a different outlook on life in which adults have made their paths, rules and choices clear, forsaking a world that cannot ever look back and choose(s) not to repeat the errors of the past. So, here is to being an adult who believes in the work of the United Nations and sees the overlap between the U.N, the E.U and the African Union in legislation, remit and scope as well as infrastructure and organisation. Now, imagine bridging the gap between all three and calling it something else such as Peace or even the Office of Global Anti-corruption and Global Disarmament or even a job.
